London be without lodgers? What would But they are treated as political outcasts. Every man in his time has been a lodger, perhaps for t many years, but no sconer does he become a great man than he turns his back on his own former committee -nye. his own flesh and blood, and closes the bale of the Constitution in their face. What can be the motive for this ingratitude? It cannot be such an object to make, careful lodgers murry and keep house. That might be imagined if our great Reformers had lurge familier of daughters, but Chancellors of the Exchanger are generally much more interested in maintaining the doctrine that a man can live well on 100% a year, and that, having that, he had better be content with his condition. The nation used to tax bachelors as such which, by the byc, would have brought into Mr. Disract's Bill the whole lodger class, but we l have ceased to legislate with a view to increase | Office of the Undersigned. the population. Possibly, it is feared that the growd of Government employées may wield their vote with restless importantly, if not success, for nercese of pay, steps in rank, shorter days, and onger holydays. Well, if necessary, they might he excepted, as it has often been proposed to except the men of the dock-yards. But why for this, or any other reason, disfranchise the University student, and the entire youth of the elerical, legal, and medical professions? Then youth in the professions lasts very long. It is a young lawyer, and generally a lodger also, at Then there are the city clerks, the shopmen, and many thousands of persons employed in our numerous and various parufuntorius. They decupy whole regions in the quiet suburbs, oftener as lodgers than as householders. Their life has not often too many charms about it, and their ambition, if they have any, has long been starved out of them. Why may not a little dignity be golded to their hard lot, by embling them to contribute their electoral mites to the return of a metropolitan member? But there are many constituencies in which we suspect they would wid up into a more important aggregite, and now and then turn the scale. It would extensive Godowns attached, be only reason, too, that in their case the condition of a long residence in the same lodgings should give place to other provisions with the kingdom a political "high life below stairs." The man in the basement, perhaps an honest arbisan, perhaps a sot maintained by a hardworking wife, is an elector, a citizen, and a pillar of the State. He can read the newspapers and discuss politics every day with the ennobling sensation that he can do as well as say, and can take an actual part in the great battles of truth and right. The three or four gentlemen overhard may perhaps be able to take a more somprehansive and dispassionate view of public questions, but they are political Helots, they are | Wallington and Gage Streets, and of two hundred the Parish's of our constitutional Brahminism. The carned signify what they may happen to think prising a superficial area of about 19,000 square mon matters which really do coucern them feet. Vot curtainly they have claims, even on the lowest ground, to share political existence with the good people in the basement. ... Sure, it's the lodger that pays the rint,"—and often a kood deal more than the "rint," the nominal householder being virtually his servent, and living at his expense. The total omission of the Lodger Franchise from the present multifarious and emissarous measure can only be explained by the rapidity of execution necessary under the circumstances. No doubt it would require more careful arrangements than could be extemporized in such a change of front, as that we have lately seen. But we were promised principles instead of expediency, and if principle s to decide the question it must be in favour of the lodger, whatever the practical difficulties

The Silesian capital. Breslan. will be repre which may not have its equal. It is an astrono-nical clock, made by a Breekar citizen. Here E. Soluble, which has been admired by scholars as a real work of genius. The chek shows on a large dial-plats, artistically on decorated the time of Breslan, and on a smaller plate, immediately underneath, the Berlin times with seconds stroke On the back of the case, which is undered grey murble, and before which the pendulum swings, are, on the right and left, two vertical rows, each of twolve dial-plates, which show the corresponding time. by hour and minute, of twenty-four of the most imporbant towns of the world, viz., Pekin. Sydney. Calcutta, Moscow. Shint Petersburg, Constantinople, Rome, Paris, Marseilles, London, New York, Washington, San Francisco, etc. On those twenty fourdial. plates the minute-hands only move, all at once, a minute on; after the lapse of a minute, with the stroke of the sixtieth second, but each plate. shows, by a special index, also the time of the day. Under the dist-plates, and over a looking-plass, stands a nicely—finished globe of the earth, which completes its movement round its axis in exactly twenty-four hours. A hand fixed above it points to the meridian, so that at one glance the different places on the surface of the earth may be read, in which, at the corresponding moment. a good watch must show the hour of noon. The weights which set, the whole clock-work going are a curious and interesting sight. By a clever mechanical combination, they are united, and form a very tastefully-ornamented whole, which carries, again, three hands, representing a complete almanac, one hand pointing to the month, another to the date, and the third to the day of the week; while, under the middle dial-plate," a ball, figuring the moon, represents the different phases of light of the Earth's gatellite. The mechanism by which it has been possible, independently of the clockwork, to create the conhined various movements in the body of the weights, is quite new and very ingenious. But Herr Scholz'is not content with the different functions of his clock, such as we have described them. In the lens of the seconds pendulum he has introduced a emefully executed spring, or house on the Praya, next to the Oriental Bank. metal baromenter: and besides this, he uses the nendulum itself as a thermometer. - Athenesia
